History Defined

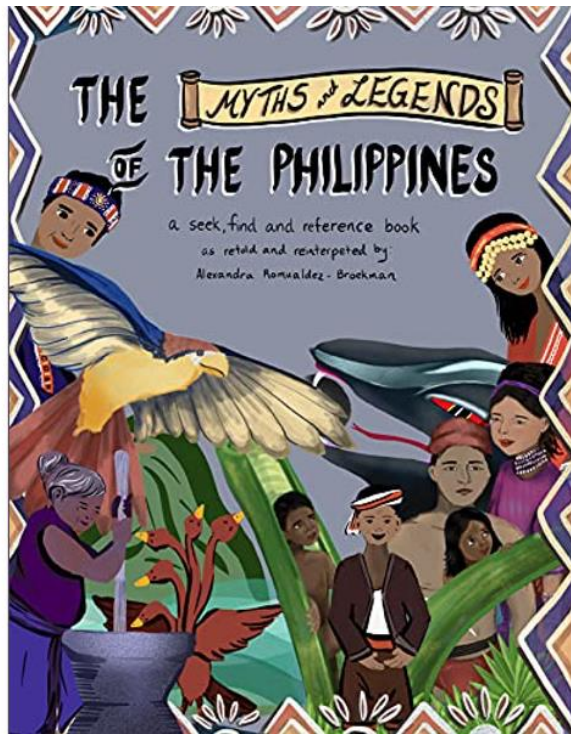

“ANG HINDI LUMINGON SA PINANGGALINGAN, HINDI MAKAKARATING SA PAROROONAN”

- It is a discipline that deals with the study of significant events in the past in order to ascertain the truth.
- It refers to the study of chronological events that happened in the past. It is also a descriptive study of recorded events.
- It is the study of texts which are presented in narrative form. Its scope is somehow related to anthropology because it examines relics and things that occurred and were used in the past.
- It is not only about facts that happened in the past but also about how people interpret those facts. Thus, it is a very contentious field of study.

Purposes of Studying History

- It narrates the events that happened in the past in order to understand the present and somehow predict and/or influence the future.
- It helps us understand people and societies because it offers a wide range of information on how people and societies behave.
- It teaches us to appreciate our heritage in a broad perspective. Heritage is also known as a legacy that was passed on by our forefathers. Appreciating our heritage is also a way of being grateful for the nationalistic efforts of our forebears.
- It enables us to think critically. As we discover the events that transpired in the past, we tend to relate them to the issues of the present. This enhances our ability to evaluate the concerns of our period.

Sources of Historical Data

- Written sources – refer to recorded events through manuscripts, testaments, wills, newspaper articles, diaries, contracts, books, etc.
 - ❖ These sources may either be primary or secondary. Primary sources are by-products of events that have taken place such as a birth certificate, diploma, diary, and transcripts. They also offer an inside view of a particular event. Secondary sources, on the other hand, are materials that interpret and analyze primary sources like newspaper articles, history textbook, and magazines.
- Orally transmitted materials – refer to unwritten historical accounts which are often passed on from generation to generation through word of mouth.
 - ❖ These materials include folklores, legends, myths, and others.
- Artistic production – refer to historical sources that are in the form of visual arts and the like such as paintings, woven tapestries, sketches, carvings, engravings, and others.
- Electronic data – refer to historical sources that can be acquired from films, documentaries, television shows, computer data, and others.
- Relics and remains – refer to historical sources that can be extracted from artifacts, fossils, bones, potteries, language, traditions, buildings, and others.

Criticisms of Historical Sources

1. How verify/validate the authenticity of a particular historical source?"

-Two ways on how to evaluate the authenticity of historical sources.

External Criticism

It examines the authenticity of a source by focusing on the physical attributes of the recovered materials. This includes carbon dating and handwriting analysis.

Internal Criticism

It verifies the authenticity of the information by focusing on the material's language consistency and historical reliability (through eyewitness evidences, indirect witnesses, and oral tradition).
